ANNEX 2. CRITERIA APPLIED

Selection process for the Research Assistant position (S1)
Health and Ageing Research Group (HEALTHAGE)
Reference: S1_02T/2026

The Selection Committee assessed the applications submitted within the established deadline on the basis of the requirements, qualifications and desirable merits specified in the published job advertisement.

The assessment considered the applicants' academic qualifications, technical and methodological skills, previous research experience and suitability for the duties of the Research Assistant position.

The following criteria were applied:

1. Academic qualifications

Fulfilment of the academic requirements established in the call, namely completion of, or current enrolment in, a master's degree programme in Sociology, Demography, Political Science, Economics or a related field.

2. Quantitative research and data analysis skills

Demonstrated ability to conduct quantitative data analysis using Stata and/or R, as required in the job advertisement.

Consideration was given to applicants' experience in preparing, managing and analysing large-scale secondary datasets, in line with the responsibilities of the position.

3. Previous research experience

Previous experience working as a Research Assistant was regarded as an additional merit, as specified in the call.

Relevant experience in research activities, including data preparation, quantitative analysis and literature reviews, was also considered in assessing applicants' suitability for the duties of the position.

4. Experience with census and survey data

Previous experience working with cross-sectional data from censuses and household surveys was positively assessed as a desirable merit.

Consideration was given to experience involving comparative or cross-national datasets, given the research activities envisaged for the position.

5. Communication and language skills

Excellent communication skills in English were assessed as a requirement of the position.

Excellent written and spoken communication skills in Spanish and/or Catalan were considered additional merits, in accordance with the published job advertisement.

6. Suitability for the research activities of the HEALTHAGE group

The Committee considered the overall relevance of each applicant's academic background, research experience and methodological skills to the duties of the position and the research activities of the Health and Ageing Research Group.

Consideration was given to applicants' capacity to contribute to research involving population health, health inequalities, ageing, elderly care, causes of death and social determinants of health, as well as to undertake literature reviews and support the Principal Investigator in the group's research activities.

Overall assessment

The Selection Committee conducted an overall comparative assessment of the eligible applications, considering the mandatory requirements, the desirable merits specified in the call and the applicants' suitability for the responsibilities of the position.

On this basis, the Committee identified the application that best met the requirements and profile sought for the Research Assistant position and proposed its provisional selection, as indicated in this resolution.
